Data Loss Prevention: Keeping our sensitive data out of the wrong hands.

Data security breaches pose a serious privacy threat locally and globally. Organisations need to reduce risks associated with exposing customer and business information. For data loss prevention activities to be effective, we all need to decide on the right strategy, engage the right people, target the right data and employ the right technology controls.

Graeme McLellan is a Senior Manager with Pricewaterhouse Coopers in Wellington, providing information security risk management advice based from his 10 year's experience at PwC in the UK and NZ. He has a deep understanding of security, controls and risks from a pragmatic, business context and helps clients reduce the risk of an information security breach.
